Innovations round-up

Katerina Oblov

Summer's here, and we're all feeling a little bit lazy over at HQ. Nevertheless, now and again a fun new gadget still pops up on our Facebook page. It's up to me to let you know what's out there. Here are July's top-three innovations:

1 We've just discovered something that is completely different – glow-in-the-dark ice-cream. It comes in several different flavours, including raspberry, and its light comes from a natural food flavouring. Not being made with any dairy products, it's suitable for vegans and people who cannot drink milk.

3 In our office, we've been arguing a lot about PEGs (personal energy generators). Basically, a PEG is a stick that you carry, and while you move, walk, or run it generates energy. You then use it as an emergency battery. Basically, people who are into adventure sports like hiking think it's really handy. Sooner or later the battery always runs out though, usually when you're miles and miles away from anywhere. I'm more of an indoor person and I'm not eager to buy the PEG that I saw, especially because at £200 each, it's quite pricey.
